

years she has been an earnest worker in the Congregational church and here she will be missed in every department of the work, especially will this be true in the choir where her sweet soprano voice will be heard no more. She was prominent in the Monday Musical, an organization which has done much to cultivate an appreciation for good music in this place. Everywhere her life stood for Christian character and for those things which are noblest and best.

The influence of such a life does not die. It lives in the hearts of her friends and those with whom she came in contact. Vermontville is a better community because such a life has lived in it. While we sorrow because her place is vacant yet we feel that it was infinitely worth while to have made and filled such a place.
