The following article written by Miss Bessie Granger appeared in Monday's Grand Rapids Press. The statistics were compiled by Mrs. Flossie Rawson, and will be of interest to all our readers:

"If one were looking for a place where he might settle down to spend his life in peace and quiet and where he might be reasonably sure to enjoy a goodly span of life he could do no better than to choose the village of Vermontville. Here residents live to a truly good old age. With a population of little more than 600 the town boasts of 22 inhabitants who have passed the four score mark and of six more who will reach that goal within a year.

The first of these is Alee Lake, 85. He enjoys good health and walks a mile every morning to the postoffice for his mail, which he reads carefully. His mind is active and he keeps abreast with current events.

Mr. and Mrs. David Young, 87 and 80 respectively, keep their own home and take great interest in the things of the day. Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Fuller, 86 and 80, likewise maintain their own home and recently celebrated their fifty-sixth wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Catherine Green, mother of 11 children, at 86 years of age greatly enjoys a home by herself, with a garden for summer pastime. Nelson House, 85, is a regular attendant at church and rarely misses his daily trip to the postoffice. Mrs. William Tarbell at 86 assists with housework and does considerable sewing for herself and family. Mrs. R. A. Swift, 84, enjoys good health and takes care of her home.

Henry Brown at 83 is especially active and never fails to take his part in community enterprises. Miss Jennie Downing, 82, until recently was chief clerk at the post office where she served for more than 11 years. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stone, both 82, still are able to enjoy life and he often is on Main-st. William Surine at 84 gets down town every day and spends a good deal of time knitting various articles, which he generally shares with others.

Others to be named are: Edward Sibbrell, 83, and Miss Mary Lackey, Mrs. Leonard, Mrs. VanEpp, Mrs. Julia Hammond, Asa Brown, James Childs and Edgar Rawson, all 80.

Among those soon to reach the 80 mark are: Mrs. Etta Hallenbeck, Mrs. Mary Morehouse, Mrs. Hannah Gehman, Mrs. Asa Brown, Henry Cross and Dr. C. S. Snell, who still is a practicing physician.

Vermontville feels proud of these persons whose combined ages total considerably more than 2,000 years.

Mrs. Jess Dancer is reported very poorly.

Fredrick Hatfield was home from Detroit Sunday and Monday.

Bert Gregg and family spent Sunday at the Loveland-Ambrose home. Last Legion dance of the season next Wednesday. Come.

Mrs. Clyde Hine went to Ann Arbor Monday for another operation on her neck.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Downing of Grand Ledge visited his mother and aunt Thursday and Friday.

Leland Powers Griffith, son of Arthur M. and Mertie Mabel Griffith was born at Springfield, Michigan, September 12, 1894, and passed away at ten o'clock Thursday, March 3, 1927, following an operation for appendicitis.

The greater part of his life was spent in Kalamazoo where he attended the Public Schools and Normal. From there he moved to Lansing where he was in business with his father.

In the fall of 1917 he enlisted in the United States Army and spent eighteen months in the service, thirteen months being overseas with the 148th Aero Squadron.

In the spring of 1924 he moved to Vermontville with his parents.

On May 28, 1925 he was united in marriage with Marjorie Jordan. In the fall of 1925 he moved with his wife to a farm they had purchased.

March 17, 1927

Mrs. Jessie Bowman arrived home Wednesday morning from a two months visit with her sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sackett in Anacortes, Washington. She reports a delightful winter.

E. B. Hay is not enjoying city life just at present as much as he had anticipated for Tuesday night a case of erysipelas developed, starting in the nose and gone to the right cheek, but it is hoped it will not prove more serious.

Those from away to attend the funeral of Bruce Knowles last Friday p. m. were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kenworthy and son Walter, Mrs. George Nuffer, Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kenworthy and daughter Dora, Battle Creek; Mr. and Mrs. John Kenworthy, Agnes and John Edward, Ypsilanti; Mrs. Rexa Burns, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Burns, Mrs. Forest Burns, Pottsville; Mrs. Myron Freeman, Mrs. Kate Ward, L. C. Hammond, Roy Deis, Elton Howe (tent mate of Mr. Knowles during his service in the Army), all of Charlotte.
